Bankrate Employee Announcement made on July 3, 2017

Good morning:

Thanks everyone for joining on such short notice, I'll start off by reading from the press release we issued this morning. Bankrate, Inc. today announced that it has entered into a definitive agreement to be acquired by Red Ventures, a leading digital consumer choice platform, in an all-cash transaction that values Bankrate at an enterprise value of approximately $1.4 billion. Under the terms of the merger agreement, Bankrate shareholders will receive $14.00 per share in cash, which represents a premium of approximately 31 percent over Bankrate's 3-month average closing share price. The Boards of Directors of both companies have approved the transaction, which is subject to approval by our shareholders and other customary closing conditions.

Wow, huh... I bet you all didn't expect to come back from the weekend barbeque to hear this!

I'll pause for a second, since I'm sure many of you are googling Red Ventures right now. Red Ventures is a private company based right over the Charlotte NC border. Red Ventures is an amazing company that started in 2000 and employs more than 2,700 people, yes 2,700 people in the US and abroad – You'll see on their site that Red Ventures has won numerous awards from the likes of Forbes and others as one of America's best employers and best places to work.

I'm sure many of you are wondering, why does a combination of Red Ventures and Bankrate, Inc. make sense, and what does this mean for me, for my colleagues and our efforts going forward?

I'll start with the why Red Ventures and Bankrate, Inc. make sense together...

This transaction delivers immediate and significant value to our shareholders, and management and our Board of Directors believe this strategic combination is in the best long-term interests of our shareholders as well as our other constituencies. There's a ton of complementarity between our two businesses. Both Bankrate and Red Ventures look to be the most efficient source to acquire customers for our provider partners. Bankrate does so primarily by providing a broad and deep personal finance and care marketplaces of providers. We serve consumers by providing comprehensive, objective and expert information for consumers to make informed decisions to maximize their money. Red Ventures does it primarily through direct customer acquisition through digital channels on behalf of their provider partners – they essentially become the digital brand of their partners.

Both companies are investing in technology, products tools and leveraging data and analytics to create terrific consumer experiences and efficient customer conversion. And both have proven success in working with our provider partners at a strategic level – being a key part of partners' market planning and growth plans. Simply said, there's a lot we can learn from them and vice versa that we expect will accelerate growth for both companies.

Bankrate, Inc. brings to Red Ventures immediate market leadership, scale, credibility and authority in three terrific verticals that operate in huge addressable markets with terrific growth tailwinds. Bankrate's platforms bring affluent, in-market and high intent audiences. We also bring a world-class team, a team that is battle-tested and a team that is competing at the highest level. To quote Ric Elias, Red Ventures' CEO, "we're making this bold bet, because we believe in RATE's leading platforms; but more importantly, we believe in the people who have built it."

Moving on to what this means for you? Combining with Red Ventures puts all of the Bankrate businesses on a bigger field with more resources. Also, being part of a larger, more diverse enterprise will empower Bankrate to take bigger swings at our opportunities, and invest more consistently over longer periods of time to compete at a much higher level. For you, as part of a larger growth company, there will be more opportunities for personal growth and career advancement.

Once the transaction closes, which is expected to occur in the [second half of 2017], as Red Ventures and Bankrate management teams begin working together to identify how to best capture these terrific growth opportunities, we'll keep you updated on plans for the combined company. But to be clear, there are no plans to move where Bankrate's businesses are operating or make wholesale changes to Bankrate's business models. Until the transaction closes, it is absolutely business as usual. Our Cards, Banking and Senior Care businesses will keep providing great consumer experiences and keep providing value to providers and partners. We will continue to operate as two independent companies until the completion of the transaction.

I've asked each of our business unit CEO's and functional leaders to hold a follow up town hall on Wednesday to address specific questions or concerns you may have including about our bonus and equity plans for those that participate, benefits and the like.

I'm sure many of you may have questions as we work through this transaction and we will do our best to answer them. For now, the takeaway for you should be that we have found a great partner who truly understands and values what we do and who is committed to helping us achieve our full potential.

In closing, you should all be proud of how far the Bankrate, Inc. business has come over the past couple of years. It was your efforts, and your accomplishments that caught the attention of Red Ventures. I couldn't be more excited for the next chapters of the Credit Cards, Banking and Senior Care stories to be written.
